Chilean wines have long been known to be excellent bargains. They are inexpensive, tasty, but not necessarily what one would call profound. However, in recent years, that reputation has changed and many wines from the region have garnered excellent reviews from both Robert Parker and the Wine Spectator. Andrew Storfer will lead a tasting of the best of Chile. We will concentrate on the wines from Montes Alpha, Casa Lapostelle, and Errazuriz. We have only one bottle of each, so seating will be limited to 24 people.
