Wine grapes have been cultivated in Sicily since before 750 BC and Sicily accounts for almost 18% of all Italian wine production. But, until recently, most of that production was in cheap blending wines used throughout Europe. However, since the early 1990's there has been a change in direction from quantity to quality. Now Sicily has 22 recognized DOCs and Sicilian wines have gained an excellent international reputation. Join us as we explore some of what Sicily now has to offer.
